DASHED TO DEATH IN A COAL MINE

WORKMEN'S TRAIN WRECKED IN THE DARKNESS.

Twenty Men Badly Injured-The Wapello Coal Company's Mine at Hiteman, Iowa, the Scene of the Accident, Which Is Believed to Have Been Unavoidable.

Ottumwa, Iowa, Aug. 17.—Twenty men were badly injured and a score of others scratched and bruised as the result of a mine disaster at Hiteman Monday morning in the mine of the Wapello Coal company. Three of the injured men will die. Those most seriously injured are:

James Darby, frightfully cut about the head, one ear cut off and throat cut in two places; cannot live.

James Baxter, badly cut about the head, and will lose sight of right eye; probably fataliy injured.

Don Coulson, head scalped, right leg and back broken: will die. Alfred Clark, hips badly crushed and leg mashed. Evan Thomas, seriously cut about face and head. Charles Edmunds, both hips badly crushed, which produced paralysis; is probably fatally hurt.

Charles Bagley, leg badly crushed. Peter Swanson, two toes out of place and bone broken in foot.

Jesse Finks, caught between bumpers and seriously hurt about the face and head. The Rev. John Erickson, face cut and bruised.

Cal Swanson, both legs badly bruised. Gomer Griffiths, both legs crushed. Owen Reese, one foot mashed.

Besides the above there were probably twenty others who were more or less bruised and scratched. The accident was one of those most unlookedfor and unaccountable horrors that frequently occur in coal mines. There are 200 men employed in this mine, and the entire number were sent down in the main shaft as usual in the mornig to go to work. At the foot of the shaft they boarded the train of twenty-five coal cars sanding in waiting, and the trip down the incline to the men's rooms was commenced. The men crowded the cars, and were forced to hang to the sides, ride the bumpers and stay on in any way possible.

Hardly had the train got under full headway when the coupling between the second and third cars from the rear broke, and the forward twenty-threecars with their load of human freight dashed at full speed down the steep incline. Hardly had the men realized what had occurred when the train dashed around a sharp curve in the track, and the cars, leaving the track, piled up up in the air, with the men shrieking and groaning, into an indescribable mass of flying timbers and maimed and injured men. The men who rode the bumpers and hung to the outside of the cars were the more periously injured. They knew what was coming, but also knew that in the darkness it would be sure death to jump, and hung to their places until crushed between the cars or against the sides

The engineer knew something dreadful had occurred, and hastily summoned assistance. The word was passed around that all the miners were killed, and it soon reached the homes of the men. Women with children, aged mothers, sisters and brothers of those who had gone down in the morning crowded around the mouth of the shaft, and their cries and pleadings were heartrending. Some could hardly be restrained from forcing their way into the cars which were conveying physicians and rescuers to the scene of death below. As each man was dug from the ruins, placed in a car and sent to the ground above women and children would crowd around the catch

No blame is attached to the company in the matter, and the officials worked ed and some small ones demolished, as hard as the miners in rescuing the but no one was killed. To Unite Railway Employes.

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 17.-The federation of all railway employes in the country in the train service is the object that brings together a host of engineers, firemen, trainmen, telegraph operators and other railroad men in this city to-day and Wednesday. It will be a meeting for the purpose of awakening interest among railroad employes in the movement. It is hoped that a large number of well-known railroad officials will be present, as a promotion of good feeling between employer and employe is one of the primary objects of the gathering. Similar meetings are being held in different parts of the country, and the results of those held so far have been very sucessful. It is expected that from 2,500 to 3,000 men will be present, the orders to which, they belong representing from 75,000 to 100,000 railroad employes.

Dear Sir:-We purchased a Brau-muller Fiano about five years ago and can truthfully say that I take pleasure in stating that it has given the most perfect satisfaction in our home. It's capacity for standing in tune is certainly wonderfu! and the tone today is as good if not better than the day we bought it, and would recommend it to any one wanting a first-class Piano.

IDEAL GRANDMOTHERS.

Women Who Know the Laws of Nature and Obey Them May Live to Green Old Age. Mrs. Pinkham Says When We Violate Nature's Laws Our Punishment Is Pain--- If We Continue to Neglect the Warning We Die. Providence has allotted us each at least seventy years in which to fulfill our mission in life, and it is generally our own fault if we die prematurely. Nervous exhaustion invites disease. This statement is the positive truth. When everything becomes a burden and you cannot walk a few blocks without excessive fatigue, and you break out into perspirations easily. and your face flushes, and you grow excited and shaky at the least provocation, and you cannot bear to be crossed in anything, you are in danger; your nerves have given out; you need building up at once! To build up woman's nervous system and restore woman's health, we know of no better or more inspiring medicine than Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Your ailment taken in time can be thrown off, if neglected it will run on into great suffering and pain. Here is an illustration. Mrs. Lucy Goodwin, Holly, W. Va., says:

"I suffered with nervous prostration, faintness, all-gone feeling and palpitation of the heart. I could not stand but a few moments at a time without having that terrible bearing-down sensation.

"When I commenced taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I only weighed 108 pounds, and could not sit up half a day; before, however, I had used a whole bottle, I was able to be about. I took in all about three bottles of the Compound, and am entirely cured; now I weigh 131 pounds and feel like a new woman, stronger and better than ever in my life."

So it transpires that because of the virtues of Mrs. Pinkham's wonderful Compourd, even a very sick woman can be cured and live to a green old age.

1785-Jonathan Trumbull, American patriot and close friend of Washington, died; born 1710. Trumbull was governor of the colony of Connecticut during the Revolution. He was a man JONATHAN of wide attainment, and Washington often consulted him in emergencies. "Let us hear what Brother Jonathan has to say," was an expression often on Washington's lips. Why "brother" has never been explained; perhaps because Trumbull was originally trained for a minister of the gospel.

AN ANGRY EDITOR.

The Milwaukee Telegraph has been friendly to every faction of the republican party, and cannot be accused of prejudice therefore when it says:

"The Osbkosh Northwestern is adorting the guerrilla method of making war on those it would see destroyed. Its covert attacks upon Senator of the injunction sought is to cancel Spooner are far from creditable to a the purchase of real estate involved, republican editor who claims high and a return of the money. These rank in the party. The failure of an points will be decided when the queshonest, earnest prolonged effort of tion is taken up by the court for the Senator Spooner to secure the appointment of minister to Peru for Col. John Hicks has been a G. dsend to democratic pipers. Why? Because ever the failure Col. Hicks has used his daily paper in saythings reflecting vorably upon Col. Spooner and other prominent republicans. These sayings in the Northwestern, so long a staunch republican paper, have been nutritious bits for democratic editors, fierce in their chase after democratic advantages. Each issue of the Oshkosh paper, is quickly scanned by the greedy democracy in search of some unkind, ungrateful and unusually utterly untrue things that have been said about republicans who have helped build up and maintain the party in this and other states."

There is much wisdom in this moderate admonition and the Northwestern will profit by its consideration.

HARD TO FXPLAIN.

Somebody has expressed anxiety lest Mr. Bryan and his followers should have difficulty in finding something to say in the present compaigns. They have plenty on their hands, however, if they attempt to explain how it is in some gossip. that wheat has gone up 31 cents per bushel since last fall's campaign, while silver has dropped 14 cents an ounce in the same period. It is noticed that silver men are singularly silent on this

GULD DEMUCRATS GAIN.

Word comes from the states in which active political campaigns are on this fall that the gold democrats are making rapid inroads in the ranks of the silvercratic party, and will carry off thousands upon thousands of men who last year voted the Bryan ticket, but who now see from the develcpments since that time the folly and unwisdom of the silver thuse.

WHEN TRUSTS FLOURISHED

The shallow critics who are reiterating the asserrion that a protective tariff is a breeder of trusts seem to have already forgotten that trusts never flourished in this country as democratic tariff, which the people in their might wiped from the face of November.

All the old worm out cars are being brought into service and many a wheezy old locomotive is out on the road dragging its load to help out in the rush on the western lines.

FIGHT OVER A BELOIT SCHOOL

Tax Payers Object to the Purchase of the Bullock Site.

County Judge John W. Sale, acting for County Judge John R. Bennett, yesterday temporarily enjoined the board of the Beloit Union school district No. 2, from erecting a school house on the ground known as the Bullock site. The application was made by John Thompson, L. E. Cunningham, E. J. Adams and Walter M. Brittan. It was based on the contention that the meeting electing the directors that bought the land to build the school, was illegally held, in that it occurred on the first Monday in July instead of the fourth Monday in July. The scope purpose of determining whether the | sale will be the $1.25 qualinjunction be made permanent.

The negotiations for the sale of t he MISS JENNIE GILLETTE spent the building have been in progress for several weeks, and an agreement as to price was practically reached several days ago.

No plans for changes about the property have been announced, and nothing is likely to be done for a time, as the block is in good condition.

The Smith block, commanding as it J. S. Hurson and Thomas Clarke does, a view of the whole length of Milwaukee and Main streets, is A. J. GASTON, a prominent Beloit a landmark known to everybody in Reck county. It was built in 1872 by M. C. Smith, the lower floor being designed for use as a clothing store and the third story for Masonic lodge rooms. The Masons took p seession of the building late in 1872, the first lease being dated October 15, 1872.

The block displaced a small frame GEORGE G. SUTHERLAND is home building that had stood at the corner from a business trip to Albert Les, of Main and Milwaukee streets from an early day.

CHAPTER VI.

MYSTERIOUS NOISES. In pursuance of the directions left by Mr. Barnes and communicated to him by Burrows, Squire Olney impaneled a jury, taking them to the Lewis farm and allowing them to examine the corpse, where it lay in the position as when discovered. He then adjourned the inquest until the return of the absent detective. Meanwhile he ordered Dr. Snow, a competent surgeon, to make an autopsy, placing the corpse in an upper room and in charge of the

The jurymen and assembled neighbors dispersed slowly, as though loath to leave the vicinity. Burrows mixed with them, hoping to extract some clew by conversation which might prove of value to him. In this he failed entirely. The greater number apparently suspected that Walter Marvel was implicated, and as he was a general favorite they feared to speak with the detective lest they should compromise their

One man, however, voluntarily ap proached him and said:

"Well, that only goes to show. I always tho't as how them stories in the Borston papers wuz kinder farfetched. They make out's though you detective fellers wuz quicker'n greased lightnin. I guess you ain't no smarter than other folks. I guess I could put you up to snuff in this case anyway." Mr. Skene took his long chin whisker in his left hand, stroked it once and then turned it up so that he readily bit the end, the while looking at Burrows through the corner of his eyes, his head turned partly away, as though he were contemplating something on the distant horizon.

"Do you know anything?" Burrows spoke with a little anxiety. He recognized that the man was an eccentric and feared to do or say something that would antagonize him. After a long pause came the reply:

"Mebbe." Only this one word, muttered without removal of the whisker from his mouth. Burrows waited for more, but was forced to continue the conversation himself.

"Mr. Skene, this is a dreadful business, and if you can help us to unravel it I am sure you will do so."

"Ain't that what I'm up here for? D'you s'pose I tramped up here for exercise? Not much. But the joke is that you should need me to tell you anything. You're a detective from Bors. ton. You could tell that it would make four as easily I could. But you have your railroad business, Mr. Skene, and I have to look for criminals. That is the only difference." Burrows tried a little conciliatory flattery, and it perated to make Mr. Skene more communicative. "By Jehosaphat! You hit it square that time. I kin smell a rat, but it ain't my place to hunt him down. So I guess J'il tell you who killed Lewis an let you ketch him. Only seems to me you oughtn't to git all the glory, hay?"

"You give me the clew, Mr. Skene, and when I arrest the man you shall have full credit for giving me the clew." "Oh, I'm only jokin. You ketch the feller an I'll be satisfied. So saying, he produced a dilapidated wallet and took from it three letters, apparently quite old. They were in envelopes that scarcely held together, and the edges of the folds of the letters were almost worn through in places. Nevertheless the writing was sufficiently distinct to be legible. The squire and Burrows looked through them, and the former unhesitatingly declared that he recognized the handwriting as that of John Lewis. The contents were not especially interesting, being simply such as a father would send to a son absent at school. A detective is naturally suspicious. He is apt to doubt and question to the last, and though Burrows was comparatively new he nevertheless possessed this trait to a strong degree. know about what occurred last night He therefore examined the date of the postmark, which was 1872. Striking a match, he lighted the oil lamp and found it to be but 19 o'clock, whereas he had thought that it must be near day. Finding that there would be time enough to spare to an investigation and still to obtain a good night's rest afterward, he dressed and left the chamber. Crossing the hall, he entered the room on that side of the house, thinking that from that direction had come the noise which had disturbed his slumbers. Looking about him, it seemed evident that nothing had been disturbed, or else it had been rearranged.

He was about to prosecute his search farther, when he fancied he heard footsteps. Listening attentively, he could almost have sworn that they came from the direction of his bedroom. Hurrying back thither, he found everything just as he had left it. What could this mean? The first sound might have been in a dream, but surely he was awake the second time. Nevertheless, though he bad apparently heard some one walking in his chamber, when he reached it it was as vacant as when he had left it. There was the supernatural possibility that the ghost of the corpse in the adjoining room was promenading in the moonlight, but Burrows was above entertaining such an idea, and, as it occurred to him for a moment, he smiled as he thought "it is not midnight." However, if the footsteps nad been in that room, whether of the living or of the dead, he could not discover, for the doctor had taken away the key. Was it possible that Lewis was up and walking about down stairs? This seemed to promise an explanation, and Burrows at once went to the floor below. He entered the chamber which he knew had been assigned to Lewis. It was empty, and the bed bore no evidence of having been disturbed. Was his last surmise correct, then, and was it Lewis whom he had heard? If so, what was he doing KING'S PHARMACY, 'Sole Agent, Corner prowling about at such an hour, and Jackso a d Milwaukee Sts., Janes ville, Wis. where was he at the present moment?

This last question he would endeavor to answer, for, if he had just heard him walking, he must be in the house. But Burrows went into every room except, of course, Virginia's, only to find them all empty. Determined to solve the mystery, he replaced the lamp in his bedroom, and, again descending the stairs, seated himself on a chair in the hall, where it would be impossible for Lewis to pass him unnoticed. To a detective long vigils of patient watching become almost a habit, but sleep will overpower a man even though he be a detective. Burrows kept awake for four hours, occasionally striking a match to note the passage of time. Finally, when it was nearing the hour of 3, he would start up every little while from a doze. Finding at length that he must sleep, with commendable perseverance he still resolved not to abandon his self imposed task. In his dilemma he decided upon a bold plan, which was to lock the door of Lewis' room and tip his chair back against it. Thus he might sleep, rather uncomfortably, but yet with the knowledge that Lewis must disturb him to pass him. When he awoke again, it was once more with the consciousness of a loud noise near him, but this time it continued after he had jumped up. It was now day and quite light. As he stood rubbing his eyes, trying to collect his senses, upon recollecting what had occurred he was astonished to find that the noise, which still continued, was occasioned by some one within the room shaking the door which he had locked. In wonder he turned the key and was amazed to see John Lewis standing be-

HE SAW IT AT LAST.

An Englishman Who Heard a Joke Here and Laughed in London.

There have been so many stories told about the average Englishman's ability to see the point of an American joke that it doesn't seem as if anything new in illustration of his density could be mentioned, says the Cleveland Plain Dealer. But here is a good local story, which will be appreciated at least by those who know the parties. A genuine Britisher was in the city some time ago, the guest a prominent citizen. The latter was bent on entertaining his visitor to the best that was going, and in honor of the close of his visit gave a little banquet at the Hollenden. Everything was of the nicest, and the party enjoyed itself hugely. When the evening's festivities were under full headway the honored guest happened to notice the china. It was of English manufacture, and each piece was marked with an "H" for Hollenden. It gave the visitor a text for a few characteristic Anglo-Saxon remark.

"You're a bloomin' country," he said, "but so young an' 'elpless. Why, everything we 'ave in old England is superior, don't you know, to what you chaps produce. You cawn't compete with the mother country, you know. Why, you even 'ave to come to us for the very chinyware that covers this table. That's right, by Jove! it's queensware."

"Yes," said one of the diners with a delicious drawl, "and you'll notice it's sprinkled with the 'Hs you Englishmen have dropped over here." A smile ran around the table in which the honored guest did not join It was lost material on him. Not quite.

About a month after this feast the Clevelander received a letter from his friend, who had returned home.

"Say," the letter read, "that was a deuced clever joke your friend got off on me at the supper—the one about the 'Hs,' you remember. Do you know, I laughed like everything at that when I came to think it over in London. It town of was awfully good."

Country Merchants in Chicago.

Chicago, Aug. 17.—From the states of Minnesota, Iowa, Wisconsin, Michigan, Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, Oklahoma and the Dakotas over 500 members of the National Association of Merchants and Travelers arrived in Chicago yesterday. They are but the vanguard of the thousands that are expected here to-day and to-morrow and during the rest of the present week. The National Merchants' Association has a membership of about 55,000, and between 5,000 and 10,000 are expected to be in Chicago during the week.

It takes more than space in a newspaper to make good advertising.
